Annual Report

2021

Kids Should Go Far. Not Hungry.

Since 1989, President's Choice Children's Charity has nurtured the wellbeing of more than 6 million Canadian children.

Now, we're on a mission to feed one million children every year by delivering Power Full Kids programs at school and all summer. Power Full Kids takes our existing daily food programs and elevates them with new activities and resources, because every young person should experience the confidence that comes from knowing how to grow and cook your own food.

Message from our Chairperson

After the uncertainty of the first year of the pandemic, in 2021 the team was focused on “alignment”. Alignment of our programs with a singular goal, and of our fundraising with the social purpose of our founder, Loblaw Companies Ltd. (“Loblaw”)

The charity’s goal, to feed one million children annually, requires the collective efforts of the Loblaw colleagues who fundraise and donate so enthusiastically in support of our children. Aligning with the company’s purpose, to help Canadians Live Life Well, and being a cornerstone of their commitment to advance social equity, bolster these efforts.

President’s Choice Children’s Charity is fortunate to benefit from the contributions of Loblaw customers, colleagues and vendors, who care so much about doing what’s right for our children and their future.

Message from our Executive Director

At the heart of a child's struggle with hunger is the isolation, anxiety and stress that comes from trying to manage more than you can handle, or the desperation of being out of control. Children experiencing hunger miss more school and disrupt class more often. Their friends know that they are struggling, and struggle themselves to help. This is more than our children should have to shoulder.

Feeding one million children every year will help to lift some of the burden. Our new Power Full Kids programs provide reliable, daily food – wherever kids are learning. Allowing them to focus on their school work, their friends, and their hopes, instead of their hunger. And the development of activities and resources that teach kids how to grow and cook will inspire a lifelong love of food, where it comes from and how it impacts our lives.

Lisa Battistelli
Executive Director,
President's Choice Children's Charity

Our plan to feed one million kids.

President's Choice Children's Charity aims to reach one million kids annually with good food, at school and all summer, by 2025.

Success at school can affect a young person's outlook, but the lessons aren't always academic. We learn to build relationships, confidence and resilience during our time at school, so President's Choice Children's Charity is focused on fueling this growth. Children who participate in Power Full Kids | Eat Well, our in-school program, receive meals and snacks four days per week from September to June.

We all remember carefree days spending summer with our friends, but did you know that children suffering from food insecurity experience greater loss of learning during breaks from school than their peers? Power Full Kids | Discover Food, our summer program, is tailored to meet the nutritional needs of children and youth at eight-week summer camps and help level the playing field.

All Power Full Kids programs include resources and materials that empower children and youth with the skills to grow and cook.

"I like the cooking program because I have fun with my friends and we get to eat together when we are done."

KLO is feeding student's bodies and minds

It's been more than a year since École KLO Middle School received their Power Full Kids | Future Growers container farm - a futuristic growing system that has allowed students to produce fresh vegetables and herbs, growing it themselves. The farm has become a unique teaching tool, while also creating a sustaining meal program for their students.

On a recent trip to school, President's Choice Children's Charity's Lisa Battistelli and Andrea Elliott, got to visit the school and experience how the farm has touched students, staff and community - providing a unique learning opportunity, that has the potential to make a lasting impact.

Karla Lockwood, Environmental Studies teacher at KLO, who also works with her students as part of the Future Growers program, says the purpose of the farm has grown beyond original expectations. "We are teaching students about food security and the need for access to fresh food" Karla says. "We can take the produce right out of the farm and feed our students ensuring they have healthy green leafy vegetables, and the revenue generated from the farm can go straight back into the meal program - ensuring there are healthy meals and snacks available to anyone who needs it."

"I've learned a lot food insecurity, how a lot of students go without food and don't say anything, so it makes me feel good sharing the produce that I've grown with my school community."

Some students from Karla's grade 9 Environmental Studies class have recognized the impact the program has made inside and outside the Farm. "I've learned a lot food insecurity, how a lot of students go without food and don't say anything, so it makes me feel good sharing the produce that I've grown with my school community" says Tarren, grade 9. "Before this program I didn't like getting my hands dirty working with plants. But it has opened my eyes to that I do like working with plants and has inspired me to pursue a career in plant studies."

Another student, Jabari, discovered his own personal growth from his time working in the farm and learning about food security. "This program has made me less wasteful with food, because I know not everyone has something to eat every day. I like to cook more since starting this program. My favorite is using herbs, like thyme."

The Future Growers farm touches every aspect of the school and can fit into every curriculum - from math to business class, where students create a business model to sell produce to bring revenue back into the school to supplement our meal program. KLO has also partnered with a local farm that is growing bugs for human consumption. They use the organic waste from the farm to feed the bugs. This partnership has also inspired a school wide compost program.

"The purpose of the farm is to feed our students bodies and minds." Karla says. "No student should be without food in their day. Our goal is to be able to feed kids and build community, starting inside school and branching out."

“Kids see first-hand the results of their learning. This is an incredible tool that can teach students about food security and sustainability – there are so many opportunities for learning.”

President's Choice Children's Charity and U of T aims to discover the impact of nutrition at school

Canada is the only G7 nation without a national in-school meal program. In Japan, school lunches are provided universally to all students at a highly subsidized cost. In France, multi course meals are provided to each of the country's six million students. And in the United States, the USDA operates a national, free or low-cost program. With involvement from Provincial, Municipal and potentially Federal governments, and hundreds of charities, all operating a variety of delivery models, how do we choose the right food program for Canadian students?

We believe the first step is to understand how to remove hunger as a barrier to learning for more than one million children who attend school hungry. Hungry kids experience 27% higher anxiety levels, they miss more school, and they disrupt their class more often – extending the impact of hunger even further to other students. Do our kids need a hot lunch to fuel their learning, or to find a basket of snacks readily available in the classroom?

To better understand the problem, the current delivery models, and how to have the biggest impact for our kids, President's Choice Children's Charity approached the team at the Joannah & Brian Lawson Centre for Child Nutrition, part of the Temerty Faculty of Medicine at the University of Toronto, to conduct a comprehensive study on how school-based meal programs are supported, delivered and implemented across Canada.

Fully funded by a $2 Million-dollar grant from the Charity, the study, called Feeding Kids, Nourishing Minds, includes researchers from medicine, public health, social work, engineering, humanities and early child development. It will be the first to inform and benefit all organizations within the school-based nutrition landscape, so kids who eat well can continue to do well.

"Many people and organizations put huge effort into feeding children in schools every day across this country," says Daniel Sellen, the study lead and director of the

Lawson Centre. "We need a much fuller picture of this work to guide policy and program development, and to improve delivery at the community level."

"This data is a missing piece of the national school food program conversation, so our priority is for the results to be publicly accessible and follow academic standards of research independents," says Lisa Battistelli, the executive director of Presidents Choice Children's Charity.

"It will inform development of financially responsible programming that delivers a measurable impact for kids – not only for us, but for anyone who needs it, including policy makers."

The researchers will begin to publish findings this year, and President's Choice Children's Charity will share those with our network as they become available.

Helping Canadians Live Life Well

Thank you Loblaw Companies Limited (Loblaw), and its Customers, Colleagues and Vendors.

Loblaw has a responsibility to make a positive impact on the communities they serve. That view is central to the company's purpose: helping Canadians live life well.

President's Choice Children's Charity is proud to be a cornerstone of Loblaw's efforts to advance social equity. The company is committed to fundraising and donating $150 million by 2027 for the charity's effort to feed one million children annually. In the four years since making the commitment, the company has activated its network of stores, customers, vendors and colleagues, raising more than $66 million. Additionally, the cost of the charity's administration and operations is funded directly by Loblaw, ensuring that 100% of every personal donation helps kids.

Sheila orchestrates a community chorus for her kids

Hunger in Sudbury, On, like in many of our communities, is closer to home than most people realize.

"I don't think people can truly understand it without seeing it first-hand" explains Sheila Nosich, Administrative Assistant at Holy Cross Catholic Elementary School. "Sometimes you take for granted that everyone is eating three meals a day, or has a warm bed but that's not reality for some."

"This program lets us build relationships. The kids know they can count on us and feel comfortable to tell us that they are hungry, and it's ok. That means everything to me."

Sheila describes her community as, "small and tight-knit, where everyone helps each other out." So, when an influx of new Canadians arrived in the area, the Holy Cross school community quickly identified a need for a universal school meal program – that's where President's Choice Children's Charity came in.

Power Full Kids, the charity's new signature program, reaches children in communities across Canada, providing them with regular meals and snacks and education that teaches them to grow and cook. By participating in the program, Holy Cross can provide more well-rounded meals, for more children. For Sheila, the benefit is obvious, "It totally changes their behavior and improves focus." Sheila explains "I've had students in the past that could be a little disruptive in class. I discovered they weren't getting enough to eat at home to have a proper breakfast. Once I offer a snack and they gobble it up, you can see an immediate positive change and they are ready to start the day."

Sheila helps facilitate the program, but gives all the recognition to the dedicated volunteers who do all the heavy lifting. Each week, five current and former school community parents and grandparents work hard to ensure the 415 students receive the meals and snacks they need. "It's really a team effort - they meal plan, grocery shop and prepare the meals every week. Some of the parent volunteers don't have children in the school anymore but they choose to stay on to help out." But for Sheila, it's more than providing a meal, she also wants to make sure each student feels important and loved. To her, that's the best outcome.

"This program lets us build relationships. The kids know they can count on us and feel comfortable to tell us that they are hungry, and it's ok. That means everything to me."

We fuel every stage of a child's learning.

Children at all ages can experience hunger. That's why we work with schools to provide good food, at every stage of a child's learning.
